

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

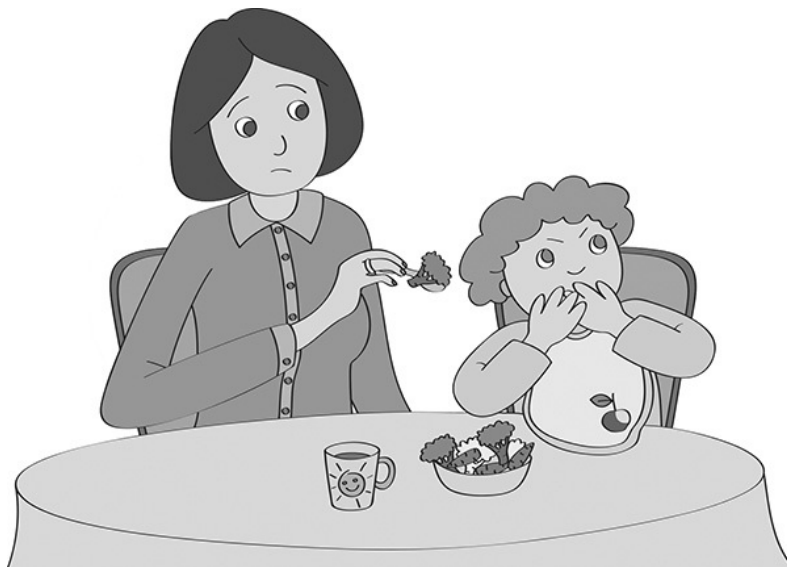

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Help! My kid is a picky eater!

Learning Outcome

Identify and describe events in the news in a range of social and work contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can discuss eating habits.
- I can talk about habits in the past.
- I can describe people and things.

Ask your partner:

- Do you have good eating habits? Why or why not?
- What were your parents' eating habits like when you were growing up?
- Did you use to be a picky eater?

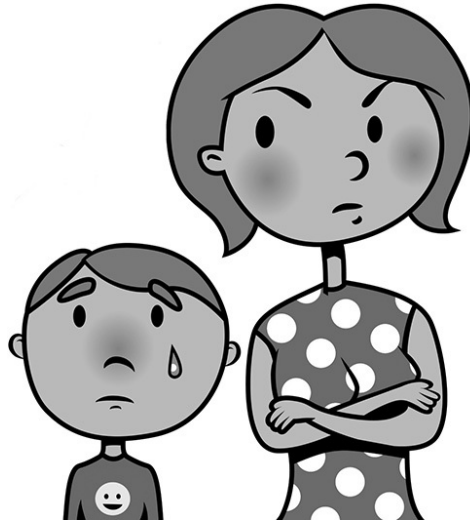

Let's Explore!

Sally blogs about a new study in Wales ... what does it mean for fussy eaters?

* A "study" is a research project.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Fussy Kids Can Be Cured!

Many of us know the problem that many parents face when their kids spit out certain foods and turn down others. Parents used to try all sorts of tactics to get their kids to try out new foods and clean up their plates. They would try waiting all night, hiding vegetables in food, arguing or giving rewards.

Eventually, they would give in and let the child have whatever they wanted. Now a compelling study in Wales has shown that these fussy children can be convinced to eat healthy foods by watching "cool" videos.

In the study, children with fussy eating habits watched videos that showed role models enjoying and eating up the food that the fussy kids disliked. The role models were other children their own age who were sophisticated and "cool." These cool kids ate healthy foods, ate them properly, and were praised for doing so.

What the study found was that the fussy children changed their opinions about what they had to eat. Their eating habits also improved after they watched the video. Parents everywhere are thrilled!

Let's Practice!

How would you describe things?

Instructions: Draw a line to complete each sentence by matching them with their missing halves. Read the sentences aloud. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

- | | |
|-----------------------------|--|
| 1) A compelling | a) to try a different tactic to help their fussy children eat better. |
| 2) Parents everywhere | b) study in Wales has shown that fussy eaters can be convinced to eat healthy foods. |
| 3) Parents everywhere think | c) are thrilled. |
| 4) People feel compelled | d) the study is thrilling. |

Let's Practice!

What did parents do in the past with their fussy eaters?

Instructions: Read the sentences. Write the missing words. Use plates, tactics, used to try, would try waiting, would give in.

- 1) Parents _____ all sorts of _____ to get their kids to try out new foods and clean up their _____.
- 2) They _____ all night, hiding vegetables in food, arguing or giving rewards.
- 3) Eventually, they _____ and let the child have whatever they wanted.

Extension Activity

Interview someone about their eating habits.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Choose a person to interview about their current or past eating habits.
- Ask them to describe their eating habits and if their parents ever tried any tactics to get them to try out new foods.
- Write down a short summary of what they said.
- Try to use adjectives, phrasal verbs and used to/would.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I interview someone about their eating habits.

☐ ☐

I describe people and things.

☐ ☐

I talk about past and present habits.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- to turn down (verb): to refuse something offered
e.g. Kids spit out certain foods and turned down others.
- to clean up (verb): to completely finish your plate
e.g. Parents want their children to clean up their plates.
- to give in (verb): to surrender; to admit defeat
e.g. Parents eventually gave in and let the child eat whatever they wanted.
- to eat up (verb): to finish everything
e.g. Video showed role models eating up food the kids disliked.
- compelling (adjective): exciting; very interesting
Example: A compelling study in Wales shows that fussy kids can be convinced to eat.
- thrilled (adjective): excited
e.g. Parents everywhere are thrilled.
- tactic (noun): strategy
e.g. Parents used to try different tactics to get their children to eat.
- fussy (adjective): difficult to please e.g. Fussy children can be convinced to eat their food.

Learning Points

Adjectives About Feelings and Reactions

You talk about feelings and reactions using adjectives. It is important to use the correct kind of adjective - it is common for English language learners to confuse the two kinds of adjectives when talking about feelings and reactions.

1. -ed adjectives

Adjectives that end in -ed are used to describe how a person feels , like annoyed , fascinated , entertained , surprised , worried or tired.

I am annoyed.

Parents are thrilled.

2. -ing adjectives

Adjectives that end in -ing are used to describe things and situations, like annoying , entertaining, surprising, worrying or tiring.

These adjectives describe the effect something has on a person.

The study is compelling. (It makes me feel compelled.)

Work is tiring. (It makes me feel tired.)

Examples:

- Now a compelling study in Wales has shown that fussy kids can be convinced to eat healthy foods.
- Parents everywhere are thrilled!

Learning Points

Used to and Would

Would and used to have similar meanings. They are both used to describe something that happened regularly in the past but doesn't happen any longer.

You use used to and would to tell stories and share anecdotes about the past.

However, there is an important difference between used to and would.

Would is not used unless you know that the time frame is in the past, while used to does not require this.

Read the following example:

We would visit India every summer when we were children.

When we were children refers to a past time frame and therefore makes the meaning of would clear.

We used to visit India.

We used to visit India every summer.

We used to visit India every summer when we were children.

Here, you do not have to include a past time frame, since the meaning of used to is clear.

