Let's Start!

It was exciting, but it was very wholesome.

Learning Outcome

Identify and describe events in the news in a range of social and work contexts.

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about social activities.
- I can talk about habits in the past.
- I can describe people and things.

Ask your partner:

- What do you think about the dating situation in your country?
- Do you think dating now is different from your parents' generation? In what way?

Let's Explore!

Sally blogs about her interview with her coworker, Gail. What does Gail say about dating in the past?

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Sally: Many of my readers ask me for dating advice. This made me think about what dating used to be like for people. I decided to ask my co-worker, Gail. Gail says, "When I was younger, we didn't start dating until high school. We used to spend more time playing with toys or being adventurous outside than we did thinking about the opposite sex. I think the mindset was very different than today. My friends and I would talk about boys, but our parents were much more protective of us and wouldn't allow us to go out alone with a boy. He would have to come over for dinner, meet our parents and even then, we would only be allowed to see each other for an hour or two. My friends used to sneak out of the house sometimes to meet up with their boyfriends ... it was exciting, but it was very wholesome."

"The ease of access to personal e-mail and social media accounts give kids no boundaries within which to function. They don't have the wisdom to know right from wrong at that point in their lives - being a teenager is about pushing boundaries and testing limits, right?"

Let's Practice!

What was it like when your mother was dating?

Instructions: Underline all the incorrect words in the sentences. Rewrite the sentences correctly. Read them aloud with a partner. Check your pronunciation with your instructor.

1. It was excited, it was very wholesome.
2. Dating in the past seems more bored than dating nowadays.
3. I was shocked when my grandmother told me her shocked dating stories.
4. My mother's dating stories are so charmed.
5. My grandfather seemed confusing when I told him about dating and social media.

Learning Points

Adjectives About Feelings and Reactions

You talk about feelings and reactions using adjectives. It is important to use the correct kind of adjective - it is common for English language learners to confuse the two kinds of adjectives when talking about feelings and reactions.

1. -ed adjectives

Adjectives that end in -ed are used to describe how a person feels, like annoyed, fascinated, entertained, surprised, worried or tired.

I am annoyed.

Parents are thrilled.

2. -ing adjectives

Adjectives that end in -ing are used to describe things and situations, like annoying, entertaining, surprising, worrying or tiring. These adjectives describe the effect, something has on a person.

The study is compelling. (It makes me feel compelled).

Work is sometimes surprising, too. (It makes me feel tired.)

Examples:

- It was exciting, but it was very wholesome.
- We were never bored playing outside.

Learning Points

Used to and Would

Would and used to have similar meanings. They are both used to describe something that happened regularly in the past but doesn't happen any longer.

However, there is an important difference between used to and would.

Would is not used unless you know that the time frame is in the past, while used to does not require this.

Read the following example:

We would visit India every summer when we were children.

When we were children refers to a past time frame and therefore makes the meaning of would clear.

We used to visit India every summer.

Here, you do not have to include a past time frame since the meaning of used to is clear.

Examples:

- I used to go out with a guy before I left for culinary school.
- When we were in high school, Ted would write me poems and send me flowers every week.
